

2022 Landscaping with Colorado Native Plants Conference Call for Presentations!

On February 26, 2022, the Landscaping with Colorado Native Plants Conference will offer a full day of educational programming promoting the cultivation and maintenance of native plants in the landscape. Our keynote speaker will be Dr. Douglas Tallamy, author of Bringing Nature Home and Nature's Best Hope. This virtual conference reaches over 700 attendees, including home gardeners, students, horticulturists, growers, parks departments and land managers.

The Landscaping with Colorado Native Plants Conference planning committee is now accepting session proposals for the 2022 event. If you have expertise with designing, growing or maintaining native landscapes and would like to be considered as a Conference speaker, please send proposals to lwcnpconference@gmail.com by June 30, 2021. The Conference team is looking for engaging speakers that offer information and inspiration that attendees can put into practice. Please feel free to share this Call for Proposals to other native plant experts within your network.

Proposals should be sent as an email attachment in MS Word and include:

- Presenter contact information, bio and photo (for conference website)
- Presentation title
- Abstract (maximum of 75 words) – summary of what the presentation will cover
- Three learning objectives – What do you expect attendees to learn from your presentation?
- Audience– New to Natives or Knows the Natives
- Format – presentation, panel or demonstration

The conference is comprised of 2 tracks: New to Natives and Knows the Natives. New to Natives presentations are geared to a general audience who are just getting started on native landscapes. Knows the Natives sessions should presume a strong background in species knowledge as well as experience with managing native landscapes. All sessions are 50 minutes long, including Q&A. Sessions may include video, panel discussions, demonstrations and presentations. For examples of previous programs, please visit the Conference website:

The planning committee will review and score all proposals and notify selected speakers no later than July 31, 2021. Priority will be given to proposals from members of underrepresented groups and to those who have not previously presented at the Landscaping with Colorado Native Plants Conference.

Speakers invited to present at the 2022 Conference will receive a small stipend and complimentary Conference registration.

For questions about this Call for Proposals and about the Landscaping with Colorado Native Plants Conference, please contact lwcnp@gmail.com.

The Landscaping with Colorado Native Plants Conference promotes the inclusion of native plants in our landscaping to benefit pollinators and songbirds, save water, and restore the beauty and health of nature in the places we live, work and play.

While we recommend the use of straight species and local ecotypes wherever possible, we support the use of varieties and cultivars of native species as long as their breeding doesn't interfere with their ability to function in nature and maintain key relationships with pollinators and other lives.

The Landscaping with Colorado Native Plants Conference is brought to you by a coalition of partner organizations: Butterfly Pavilion, Colorado State University Department of Horticulture and Landscape Architecture, Colorado State University Extension, Colorado Native Plant Master Program®, Colorado Native Plant Society, Denver Botanic Gardens, Wild Ones Front Range Chapter, High Plains Environmental Center and Susan J Tweit, author.
